What this book is all about ? Excerpts from When Shall We Meet Again ? --
----- The human life is akin to a river. None can foretell its direction. Rivers are born small. They get bigger as they advance. Same with humans too, both spiritually and physically. The rivers collect sand, stones, leaves, sludge and whatever they tread in their paths. Humans too carry with them their upbringings, their education, the habits and style of people around them, the culture of their places and most importantly the memories of life events and their influences upon them. Rivers go through lean patches. Humans too. Rivers are sometimes very calm. They sometimes flood ; Same, with the humans. Some rivers are ruthless. They cause floods and destroy lives. Some humans are ruthless too. They get charged up and try to harm others around them. Some rivers irrigate and help in a positive way. Some humans serve and help the people around them. And let me add that clichéd sentence to this list....All rivers join the sea. And all humans merge with Him. Therefore, rivers symbolize us. They are like the human shaped deity in which we see our Gods. After all, identification is required to create oneness. And oneness is the essence of Gita.....So in rivers, we see ourselves....What's wrong in worshiping them? -----xx----- The moment Naren hugged her and they were on bed, and as Lisa felt the passion rage into her body, all her doubts about her sexuality or rather the lack of it, which had been tormenting her right from her college days, vanished instantly and she felt as if she had been liberated. Naren, on the other hand was having a liberation of the other kind. He had never felt how tender a girl's body would be ..... -
