2IC: Business as Mission for the Rest of Us By Michael R Baer

Many Christians in business feel they have to sit on the sidelines of Business as Mission because they aren't the owner or CEO. 2IC (Second in Command) explores how God has used and still uses those who "aren't the boss" to impact others for the Kingdom in their career and workplace.

Editorial Review

About the Author

Michael Baer was converted to Christ in college. Almost immediately involved in ministry he went on to become a church planter and pastor. He went on to graduate from Flagler College (BA in History) and Dallas Theological Seminary (ThM). Then, after 15 year in the pastorate, Baer was led into business where God began to show him the ways in which sacred-secular thinking and the general Christian suspicion of business people had limited the impact of business on world mission. Baer went on to help launch the creation of the Jholdas Project, a Kingdom Business Incubation program focused on equipping persecuted Christian minorities in starting businesses so that they can support their families and indigenous mission activity. Today the Jholdas Project operates in over 25 countries classified as least reached. Baer is the author of several books, including Business as Mission, Street Level Romans, Kingdom Entrepreneur, Prayers for My Grandkids, and Devotions for My Grandkids. He is a popular conference speaker and lecturer. Baer and his wife live in the mountains of North Carolina where she operates a bed and breakfast inn. They have two daughters and five grandchildren.
